Concerning this course

What part does religion play in science fiction fantasy? How does sci-fi capture the real-world complexity of religious faith and practice? What do the themes that consistently appear in science fiction reveal about the often ambivalent relationship between outer space and our spirits? Will religion exist in our collective future? Will science one day answer our deepest questions? Will technology change what it means to be human?

This seminar explores the relationship between religion and science fiction through the critical study of a wide range of science fiction, including Star Wars, Star Trek, Dune, and The Lord of Light. We will explore key themes in the study of religion, such as creation myths, innocence and experience, ritual, sacrifice, and redemption, as well as explore contemporary questions regarding religious diversity and the interplay of religion and culture. We will also consider how fan cultures and perhaps even the concept of some science fiction itself may or may not resemble whatever it is we mean when we use the term “religion.”

Learning objectives

- Become familiar with the central theoretical approaches to the study of religion through the lens of science fiction
- Practice writing in a variety of genres
- Acquire general knowledge of how various religious traditions intersect with the development of science fiction in its different formats
- Think about science fiction and religion from a variety of perspectives, including production, consumption, and adaptation

Prerequisites

This course assumes no specific prior knowledge of the works that we will be exploring, but does assume at least a general interest in science fiction.
Assignments

What follows is a general summary of the assignments for this course. Further details about each will be available on Canvas and in class.

Class Attendance and Participation: This class is a seminar that meets only once a week so participation and discussion is a large part of the course. Every effort should be made to attend each session but should a situation develop that will impact your performance or attendance, please inform the instructor immediately. Participation includes reading and preparing for class and participating in discussions. You'll also post three discussion questions based on that week’s materials in the Canvas discussion forum by Monday evening.

The Tardis: This is a fun, credit/no-credit assignment that will help me get to know you. Write a two page (typed, double-spaced) essay. At the beginning, please introduce yourself to me in whatever way you would like to – let me know where you’re from, what you’re up to so far at FIU, and why you are taking this course. Then, help me get to know you even further by answering the following question: If Doctor Who showed up in the Tardis and offered you the opportunity to go anywhere in time or space for an extended journey. Where and when would you go and what three items would you take with you and why? Those three items should tell me more about you. Be creative, write clearly, and have fun! Due: Submitted to the instructor via Canvas messages by Monday, January 14th.

Blog Essay: Your first major essay for the semester will take on the form of a blog essay for an erudite popular readership. This means that it will be 800-1,000 words, on the topic of your choice, analyzing one or several of the works that we have either read or watched from the first month of the semester. You can include information from other readings/films with which you may be familiar but must be sure to include one or more of the works that we've enjoyed together. You don't actually have to post a public blog; the idea is to learn the format of writing a thoughtful piece suitable for an online format. Due: February 4th.

Studies in Fandom and Adaptations: All of the series that we are studying this semester have vibrant fan communities; some have been adapted from written works into a film or television series and others have been adapted from films to television. For this second paper, you will have a choice between writing a

Source materials will include

Star Wars: “Return of the Jedi” (1983) (available on Xfinity & Amazon for a charge; VHS available from FIU library) and “The Last Jedi” (2017) (available on Netflix)

The Day the Earth Stood Still (2008) (available on Amazon/Xfinity for a charge & on a DVD from the library)

Children of Men (2006) (available on Netflix)

Blade Runner (1982) (available from FIU (Swank) sophisticated review of an adaptation or doing a micro-ethnography of a fan community or fan discourse. Either choice will help you learn how to think about how texts/films/television circulate in the world. Due: March 4th.

Imagined Dialogue: For your final writing project, you'll write an imagined dialogue (or larger conversation) between two or more characters from at least two different science fiction series we have studied this semester. You will use this exercise in order to demonstrate your knowledge of the major themes of the course and the different styles and perspectives of each author. Due: April 8th.

Changes

The instructor reserves the right to alter readings, assignments or the schedule below as dictated by the needs and interest of the class. Any changes will be mentioned in class and announced on Canvas.

Readings & Films/Television Series

There will be two novels to read (Lord of Light and Dune) and then additional articles that will be posted on Canvas in addition to materials from Sacred Space. I'd suggest starting to read Lord of Light soon so that you don't have to rush. We'll be working with it prior to Dune, which will be later in the semester.

Regarding the movies and television episodes that we will watch, I've included notes as to where each is available for free (to Netflix or Amazon Prime subscribers) and where there is a charge. I'm exploring the best way to handle those with a charge by perhaps purchasing them myself for our use. If you have access to any of the particular items that we'll be using, please let me know.

I recognize that some of you will be more versed in some of the works than in others and that some of you may have more knowledge about a particular work than others in the class may have. You can share those insights both in our class discussions (checking with folks regarding spoilers if necessary) and in the writing assignments. Feel free to include other works by the authors that we have explored in your essays and even in your class comments.

Schedule of Readings / Viewings

This list will be updated next week.

01-08 Introductions! Determining our baseline (including subscription access); Watch Star Trek: Deep Space Nine – “In the Hands of the Prophets”

01-15 Prior to class, watch “Planet of the Apes” Episode 1 (see Canvas for link); Read any articles posted in Canvas; Post discussion questions by Monday night
