Jews, Genetics and Religion
Tudor Parfitt, Florida International University

November 8th, 2012 | 4:00 PM | SIPA 103

Since early medieval times it was widely believed that some of the Lost Tribes of Israel were to be found in the unknown interior of the African continent. These myths and beliefs, mingling with a range of radicalized colonial fantasies created expectations that Jews inhabited the continent. With the advent of modern genetics a spanner was thrown into the works......