Course Prerequisites

Course prerequisites, if any, are listed below.

Course Description

This course introduces students to the nature and variety of religious phenomena, belief, and practice. It shows the ways religion is studied, a cross-cultural study of the variety of history forms of religious belief and practice, such as deity conceptions at the divine myth, ritual scripture, rites of passage, views of the human problem evil, and the ways and goals of an examination of the challenges faced by religion today.

Why should I care about religion?

Why do bad things happen to good people? Is religion irrelevant in our fast-paced technological world? Does the sacred look the same across traditions? How can the study of religion help us understand current events? Is religion a creative or destructive force? How does the study of religion relate to your major? These are just some of the questions that we will explore throughout the semester.

This course is interested in examining the different expressions, practices and interpretations of religion from an interdisciplinary perspective. Although no particular tradition will be favored, materials from several traditions will be chosen to exemplify thematic topics in the experience of the Sacred. We will also focus on the tenets of religions, dispelling common misconceptions and assumptions and looking into the emergence of new practices among the post-denominational generation.

How can this course help you advance in your career?

You do not need to be personally religious, majoring in religious studies, or in a field within humanities to benefit from this course. Whatever your academic field is, this course will train you to make important connections between your career and the world of the sacred and the profane. You will be able to understand the complexity of the definitions of religion and secularization, and the role religion plays in local and international affairs.

Religious illiteracy can greatly impact our ability to understand personal and social motivations behind financial decisions, political engagement, science and technological advancement, environmental and migration policies, family planning, diet and food production, gender relations, war and terrorist attacks, and more. Whether you notice or not, religion is a universal phenomenon that continues to transform and be transformed by our societies.

Our approach is interdisciplinary, which means you will be critically reflecting from many fields of study such as philosophy, psychology, cultural studies, history, economics, gender studies, among others. This enhances your ability to think critically, communicate effectively, respond sensitively, collaborate with others and creatively resolve conflict.

Student Learning Outcomes/Objectives

Explain the basic history, development, and belief systems of various religious traditions

Identify key historical thinkers in the sociology of religion, (e.g. Émile Durkheim, Carl Jung, Max Weber, Karl Marx) and be able to identify their interdisciplinary theories about the human experience of the sacred

Identify the meaning behind religious concepts and symbols

Apply critical thinking to various topics in the field of religious studies

Demonstrate creative thinking about religious issues in the contemporary world

Conduct field research about a particular religious community

Improve writing and reasoning skills by writing and revising argumentative, thesis-driven, and evidence-based papers

Classify and utilize various approaches to the study of religion, including but not limited to: ethnographic, psychological, sociological, ethical, phenomenological

Speak intelligently about the relationship between religion and other cultural phenomena such as art, literature, music, film

Distinguish between primary vs secondary sources, insider/ideological vs outsider/academic sources (emic and etic histories/perspectives), and scholarly vs journalistic sources

Expectations of the Course

This course fulfills three major requirements for FIU undergraduates:

- University Core Curriculum (UCC) Humanities Group Two requirement
- Global Learning (GL) requirement
- Gordon Rule Writing (GRW) requirement

This means this course holds a lot more weight than your average elective. This course is designed to improve your writing and reasoning skills. This means we will be submitting drafts and receiving feedback in order to improve. That is what learning is all about, I will guide you on this journey!

Plagiarism and LLMs (AI)

"... Not Even Once." Or so the saying goes. And that is basically what I expect with regard to your LLM use in this course. Treat it like what it is, a substance that is: Addictive? Sure! Fit for actual academic inquiry? It depends. (We'll discuss this in our introduction to the course.)

This is a class that deals with a subject that transcends our culture's obsession with propositional knowledge (our overemphasis on just spitting out and debating facts). There are other kinds of knowing, and there are greater and longer-lasting forms of truth. These other forms of knowing can only be accessed when you embrace the difficulties of learning and grow as a result.

I expect every word that is written, typed, tapped, or dictated in this class to be done so by you. No exceptions. I am not expecting perfection, but I do want to see your own effort.

At FIU, the use of generated content submitted as original work is considered plagiarism. As stated in the Student Conduct and Honor Code (Section 6, article ix):

"[Plagiarism is defined as] the submission of any work authored by another person or generated by an automated tool without proper acknowledgement of the source, whether that material is paraphrased or copied in verbatim or near-verbatim form."

I take this very seriously. If you use AI (or plagiarize in any other way) to check the box of "did work for class" then you are only cheating yourself. If that is how you have come to approach school work, let this class be the one where you change that approach and allow yourself to grow as a human being and learn.

Grading

Late Work

Late submissions will not be accepted, except in cases of genuine and documented emergencies.

Avoid leaving assignment submissions for the last minute before a deadline. "Heavy user traffic" during this time may cause delays and/or errors, which can lead to missing crucial deadlines.

I, as the instructor, reserve the right to make changes to the syllabus by means of announcements or messages with ample time allowed for you to respond and adjust appropriately.

Assignments & Assessments

Overview

This course is comprised of two (2) major writing (research) assignments, eight (8) in-class discussions, and an online midterm and final. The following sections contain descriptions of each assignment. However, full and complete details will be given in the course.

Essays

This course, at its core, is a writing course. It will focus on conducting field work (physically visiting an unfamiliar religious site) and crafting well-formed research papers. There will be two major writing assignments, with the rest of the coursework bolstering and informing the creation of these works.

These essays must have a thesis (a structured argument or point-of-view), and adequately support that thesis. The essays must be organized clearly and logically.

Both papers:

- Will be 1,200 - 1,800 words and will be submitted through Turnitin (via Canvas)
- Will be formatted with MLA style formatting, with inline or footnote citations and a list of references at the end
- Will be written from start to finish using Google Docs (see details below)

Accountability and Revisions

You will be required to start and end the writing process using Google Docs. This is for accountability for your writing process. For each essay, begin with a blank document on Google Docs and share that document with my FIU email jrobe001@fiu.edu, allowing editing capabilities.

Craft as much of your planning and writing process in that document. Even if you write notes and use those, include screenshots of those notes as you copy and revise. Show your work. I use a plugin that allows me to play back your writing process. It will show me that your paper has grown organically, and allow me to see when you edited and for how long. It will also allow me to comment and suggest revisions when we get to the drafting process.

I will explain this process in more detail in the course.

Late papers may be accepted with a legitimate excuse but only with a maximum score of 75%.

Paper 1: Religious Site Field Research

This paper will require you to visit a religious site from a religious tradition that is not your own and write a report on it. This paper must have a thesis. (Note: I will provide full assignment instructions and format in the course.)

You will be revising this essay. So, using the Google Docs method, I will watch your paper as it organically grows from a blank document, to the preliminary research stage, to the addition of field notes and site photo, to supplementary research, and then your first draft.

- First Draft: You must submit a minimum 1,200-word first draft. (Export from Google Docs to PDF to submit on Canvas). The purpose of this first draft is for me to give you feedback, helping form and hone your writing skills.
 - You need to submit a picture of yourself at the site for credit. Please attach a minimum of one photo to the paper, at the end of the document.
 - Place the photo directly from your phone's photo album into the document so I can review the photo's metadata and confirm it was taken on the day and at the place you visited.
- Final Draft: After my feedback on the first draft, the final draft must be at least 1,200 words long, but no longer than 1,800 words.

Paper 2: Personal Analysis

For this essay, you will analyze yourself using the theoretical frameworks for analysis presented in this course. The purpose of this assignment is to assess whether you understand the basic concepts of the study of religion through naming what is sacred in your life. Support the 'thesis' by describing and defending your chosen sacred value meaning against the backdrop of suffering and evil, and the human problem. (Note: I will provide full assignment instructions and format in the course.)

- First Draft: You must submit a minimum 1,200-word first draft. (Export from Google Docs to PDF to submit on Canvas). The purpose of this first draft is for me to give you feedback, helping form and hone your writing skills.
- Final Draft: After my feedback on the first draft, the final draft must be at least 1,200 words long, but no longer than 1,800 words.

In-Class Discussions

We will have eight (8) in-class discussions. The discussions will be done in two phases, first we will have the preparatory stage in class, where I will present a topic based on the lectures and give you time to reflect with pen and paper. Then, you will turn in those papers to me by the end of class. Then, for phase two, in the next class we will have a guided discussion based on your written reflections.

Exams

The Midterm Exam and Final Exam will be available online during their respective scheduled dates. Each exam is worth 8.75% of the final grade, for a total of 17.5% of the final grade.

The format is that of a typical exam: Multiple-choice and true/false questions. These exams are entirely based on our assigned readings.

No late submissions will be accepted.

Participation/Attendance

Your attendance will be monitored and makes up 15% of the final grade of the course. If you are not in class, your grade will be affected. You will also be lacking critical information to complete assignments, and miss critical discussion times.

I allow a set of 3 days where you are permitted to miss class without penalty (aside from the missed assignments, if any). Please do not abuse this permission, otherwise you will not be excused when you do need to be absent. Attendance will be calculated at the end of the semester.

UCC Category Description

This course satisfies the University Core Curriculum Humanities, Group 2 requirement.

Humanities courses afford students the ability to think critically through the mastering of subjects concerned with human culture, especially literature, history, art, music, and philosophy.

Nondiscrimination Statement

The Office of Civil Rights (OCR) is responsible for ensuring that FIU maintains a workplace and learning environment free from discrimination, where current and prospective faculty, staff, and students are treated equitably. If any student, employee, or applicant has a sincere and reasonable belief that they have been discriminated against or harassed based on age, color, disability, marital status, ethnic or national origin, race, religion, retaliation, sex, or any other protected category, they can report their concerns to the OCR team through report.fiu.edu.
