Description:

This course has been prepared to be taught in a seminar format for upper-level undergraduate students and graduates students interested in the study of complex phenomenon of migration and religion. This area of study necessarily demands an interdisciplinary approach to the subject. We have identified important relationships that have been developed within the fields of History, Theology, Pastoral Studies, Sociology and Anthropology; our course will present a panorama of these approaches, taking into account a gender perspective. The course will focus on the historical Latin@s migration process in different places and times in the Americas to show their influence in the building of new states in the 19th and 20th century. There will be a balance between conceptual, methodological aspects and a retrospective overview of the reality of migration and religion as it has been experienced historically since the formation of the Americas to the present. The course will also analyze how religions are reconfigured via the immigration process focusing on different religious experiences among immigrants to South Florida. Particular attention will be paid to recent studies on Latin@ immigration to the United State, particularly to the Miami Area.

Goals:

A) Students must develop an understanding of the following:

- 1) The history of migration within the project of nation building in the Americas and specifically in the United States.
- 2) Theories and concepts presented by the combined study of migration and religion, including: assimilation, the melting pot, transnationalism, and religious reconfiguration.
- 3) The feminization of recent migration processes and gender relations among migrants will be analyzed; as well the gender perspectives and perceptions in both: the countries of origin and receiving countries.

B) Students will observe and analyze firsthand various migrants' religious communities in South Florida, choosing a particular immigrant group to develop an understanding of how theories and concepts learned in class help to interpret, or not, the immigrant religious experience. Their founding will be discussed in class. Focusing on Latinos' and its interaction with other ethnic communities.

Methodology: The course will be taught in a seminar format therefore active student participation is expected.

Requirements:

All students will be asked to do at least one presentation of the assigned readings. This presentation is not a summary of the reading; rather, the students must analyze the author's perspective and conclude by proposing questions related to the author's central ideas or assumptions, which will be discussed in the class according to the week's topic.

Undergraduate students must develop a final paper based on the analysis of a field research with some new Latino/Caribbean immigrant religious group in South Florida.

First paper: Due on January 24th (This paper must present the topic to be developed into a final paper, with main research question, potential bibliography and sources to be analyzed later)

Second paper: Due on February 28th (a continuation of the first, with a deeper analysis of the sources, of the bibliography, and further development toward the final paper)

Final paper: Due on April 24th. Oral Presentation on April 28th.

Requirements for all written work:

All written work must be typed, double-spaced, and in 12 point font (written work submitted in large font will not be acceptable); and any citations should follow MLA format. These papers must be submitted by the deadline. Late work will result in the reduction of half a letter grade per day, unless arrangements with professor were made prior to deadline.
